LIVE QUESTIONS.

The man Trainor died under circumstances which excited indignation in this community. The matter has been ventilated in the BULLETIN, editorially and by correspondence. Other communications have been withheld from publication, because it was understood that the case was being investigated by the authorities. Now, is it not about time that the public knew the result of the investigation?

Is it right and reasonable to subject the entire community to the inconvenience, annoyance and expense entailed by our passport system, because it is favored by a few tradespeople, who are too ready to give credit to extravagant customers on the strength of its security? If so, then let it be henceforth understood that the minority takes precedence of the majority.

AUSTRALASIAN MAIL MATTERS.

A passenger by the steamship Alameda, from San Francisco, informs us that a report was current in that city to the effect that the mail contract, existing between the Governments of New South Wales and New Zealand, and the Oceanic Company, would not be renewed after its expiration in November next. Overtures for carrying the mails between the Australian Colonies and England, have been for some time in progress by representatives of the Canadian Pacific Railway Syndicate in Australia, and these overtures are now reported to have been successfully arranged. Negotiations of a reciprocity treaty of trade between Australia and Canada are also known to be in active progress, with much appearance of success sooner or later; and the facilities afforded by direct steam communication, between these two British dependencies, will doubtless hasten a convention of reciprocity. It is yet, it appears, uncertain whether San Francisco will be made a way-port of the new line or be left out altogether; but it is tolerably certain that, if the reported change of contract is made, Vancouver, B. C., will be the northern terminus of the steamship line, and that Honolulu will continue to be a way port as at present.

A QUEER COMMUNITY.

This is a queer community. It is made up of so many nationalities that cohesion is scarcely to be expected. Every man—at least every native Hawaiian and every European and American foreigner—is more or less a politician.

The theoretical politics of the foreigner are determined largely by his nationality. If he is an American, he thinks American methods are the best for Hawaii; if any Englishman, he prefers the English way; and so on to the end of the chapter. There may be a few men in the country, of different nationalities, who realize that our conditions are peculiar, and that to adopt the political system of any other country in its entirety would be folly. But the majority have not advanced so far.

Political parties, in the American or English sense, do not exist here. Cliques and factions we have. Parties in the United States, Germany, France, Great Britain, and other countries are understood to be based on views of state policy, not on personal interest. We cannot truly say that such is the case in Hawaii.

Practical politics here seem to be regulated mainly by self-interest; that is, a man favors the faction or person considered most likely to benefit directly in a business or financial sense himself or friends, although the broad principle of "the greatest good to the greatest number" may be thereby ignored. Hence we find a man bitterly opposed to one set of men in power, ostensibly because they do wrong acts, and then warmly supporting another set, although they may commit the same acts.

The natural inference is, that the quality of the acts is determined by the men, and may be expressed thus: If I do not like the men—and if they do not work into my hands I cannot like them—their acts are, per se, diabolical; but if I do like them—and if they bring "grist to my mill" I cannot help liking them—their acts are, per se, heavenly. This explains why a man of principle who strenuously objected to certain doings under the old regime, and consistently declines to endorse similar doings under the new, should be considered a false and unreliable man. Truly, this is a queer community, and we have but faint hopes of its ever becoming otherwise.

PURE INTELLIGENCE AND VULGARITY.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—The youthful and caustic editor of the Daily "P. C. Advertiser" has received a shock. A paroxysm of mortification racked his enlarged and cultured intellect, because that esteemed lady Mrs. Williams attracted so small an audience to her first lecture.

In a burst of puerile and impotent rage he proceeds to castigate and malign all who did not attend. Those who were present (including the wrathful tyro) possessed "pure intelligence"; the absent were "vulgar," "betrayed their provinciality," and "lack of genuine culture," in fact were "barbarians."

Such ranting not only evinces want of taste and good breeding, but tends to injure the success of a course of lectures which are of a high order of merit.

ONE OF THE ABSENT ONES.

Honolulu, June 18, 1888.

ANTI-PROHIBITION.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—Now if prohibition decreases taxation it certainly ought to do so in the banner prohibition state, Maine, but we find the contrary to be the case. In 1880 there were paid in taxes in that State, $5,182,135, equal to $7.98 to each person; while in 1860 in the same State the whole tax only amounted to $3.50 ($2,257,213), per capita, or less than one-half what they had to pay after the State passed under the control of the prohibitionists. (See U. S. Statistics, Vol. 2, p. 1509.)

Missouri received in taxes in 1860 $4,109,653, equal to $3.40 for each person; in 1880 $10,269,736, equal to $4.73 to each person.

In 1880 debt of Maine $34.55 per capita; Missouri, $26.50 per capita; Ohio, $14 per capita. See U. S. Statistics, vol. 2, p. 552.

From the above facts you will see that pauperism is not only greater in prohibition States, but taxes are higher and the State debt larger in proportion to population than in liberal States.

Let us examine some school statistics:

Maine in 1850, populace 583,169; school attendance, 186,222; per cent, 31. In 1860, populace 628,279; school attendance, 189,210; per cent 30. In 1870, populace 626,915; school attendance 155,140; per cent 24; 1880, populace 648,956; school attendance 150,811; per cent 23. Showing a continual decrease of school attendance. See U. S. Statistics, vol. 2, pp. 1640-1641.)

In Vermont another prohibition

State the per cent of school attendance was for 1850, 29; 1860, 25; 1870, 20; 1880, 20.

New Hampshire still another prohibition State shows school attendance as follows: 1850, 27 per cent; 1860, 25; 1870, 20; 1880, 18. From the above it will be seen that school attendance fell off during prohibition. Legislation in Maine 25 per cent; in Vermont 31 per cent, and New Hampshire 33 per cent. Compare a licence State.

Missouri in 1850, population 682,044, school attendance 95,285, per cent 13. In 1860, population 1,182,612, school attendance 203,488, per cent 17. In 1870, population 1,721,295, school attendance 324,348, per cent 18. In 1880, population 2,168,280, school attendance 486,002, per cent 22, showing a continual increase of school attendance.

Prohibitionists assert that prohibition is the great highway to prosperity, let us see whether this is a fact or not.

Maine in 1850, population 538,169, manufactured products $24,661,037. In 1880, population 648,435, manufactured products $79,829,793.

New Jersey, where a saloon is to be found on every corner, had in 1850 489,555 population, or nearly 100,000 less than Maine, yet her manufactured products were worth $39,851,116; in 1880 she had a population of 1,131,116, and her products brought $254,380,236.

Connecticut had in 1880 622,700 people, and manufactured $185,098,211 worth of products, or more than twice as much as Maine, and so the comparison will hold in almost every State. As where the just freedom of the people is suppressed, and the fanatic element of selfishness and egotism always displayed by the leaders of the prohibition party enterprise is killed. Prohibition has always failed of accomplishing what its advocates claimed for it, and now they put on a face of boldness and assert everything but prove nothing.

Even in this country since the issuance of so many licences during the two years just past the crimes committed have decreased by 832, that is 832 more crimes were committed when only a few licences were issued and all of them in Honolulu.

The liquor business in all of its departments should by law only be allowed distinctly by itself, and not carried on as it is here in connection with every other line of merchandise. Then when a man went into the place to buy a dozen of wine he could not come out with 25 cents worth of ribbon or a violin string as a blind. Here in Honolulu not only loud talking prohibitionist but leading church members patronize the liquor dealers.

Prohibition failed in the Garden of Eden. Old Noah's boys received severe punishment for making fun of their father because he had over-estimated, and Jesus made wine for drunken men to drink. Let every one be consistent.
